them international quality standards. "We are very well known and respected for our quality service and above all, integrity," says Mr Rogers.

Their teams work to ensure that projects in the retail, residential, industrial and commercial sectors are planned, procured and executed on time and within budget. Yet, they keep focused on creating the best quality developments, while maintaining their clients' needs in mind.

But it is MML's partnership with Actis, sub-Saharan Africa's most experienced private equity real estate investor, which has enhanced their business positioning as a first choice, end-to-end, project management services provider in Kenya, Uganda, Rwanda and Tanzania.

All these, combined with a range of both international and local experience has given MML the staying power as a market leader in project management. "We look at the best in project management tools in the global market; analyse and see how MML can build upon these ideas, refine and then tailor make them to address the unique needs of our customers," shares the managing director.

So far, business has been good. "We have a lot of projects that we are working on for the year ahead, so for us, we do not foresee a slowdown in 2017," says Rogers. Some of their completed and ongoing projects include Garden City, Brookhouse School, Tesla Hospital, Tatu Waters, Village Market, Cavendish University in Uganda, and Bunju Heights in Tanzania.

MML has also expanded its business into commercial interior fit outs, where it has emerged as a strong brand with MML
